

Garvan Institute of Medical Research

Leaders in Science & Society

Prof Emad El-Omar

Professor of Medicine

Editor in Chief, GUT

St George & Sutherland Clinical School

University of New South Wales

“Role of the gut microbiome in health and disease”

Monday 5 June 2017 12PM, AUDITORIUM

Host: Prof John Mattick

Professor El-Omar graduated in Medicine from Glasgow University, Scotland, and trained as a gastroenterologist. He worked as a Visiting Scholar/Scientist at Vanderbilt University, TN, and National Cancer Institute, MD, USA, and was Professor of Gastroenterology at Aberdeen University, Scotland, for 16 years before taking up the Chair of Medicine at St George & Sutherland Clinical School, UNSW. He is the Editor in Chief of the journal Gut. His research interests include the gut microbiome, inflammation driven GI cancer and IBD. He is the Director of the Microbiome Research Centre at St George Hospital.